Ex-Police Commissioner Bingham, of New York, writes in a magazine article that the voters of New York are responsible for whatever official crookedness there is in the city. He says: "So long as private citizens ignore the corrupt government of their cities and make a by-word of the ballot, there can be no permanent reform, nor any cure for the grafting, bribing, blackmailing lawlessness which is eating the heart out of this republic." That is just another way of saying that the people have just the sort of government they deserve.

If they are careless of their public affairs and permit them to fall into the hands of grafters and woodenheads, they deserve to be plundered, bullied and brow-beaten.
